Vita - Professional Summary

Roy Pursley, MBA, CPA has owned his own CPA Practice for twenty years. The practice is primarily federal tax related practice that prepares returns for individuals, corporations and other legal business entities. He represents clients under power of attorney before the IRS in Audits and Appeals. Mr Pursley has taught accounting, business law and tax law in several university settings for two decades, including Southwestern University, Austin Community College, the IRS (under University contract), and the University of Texas. Mr Pursley has also taught continuing professional education classes as part of the Texas requirement for continuing education for accountants. Mr. Pursley has presented tax law updates to professional groups of attorneys and accountants.

Mr. Pursley is a member in good standing of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Austin Society of Certified Public Accountants and is a member of the Tax Section of the AICPA. Mr Pursley has also been a member of the National Institute of Tax Studies for Tax Professionals and the National Society of Tax Professionals. Mr Pursley holds both a firm license and an individual license for CPA from the Texas Board of Public Accounting. Mr. Pursley's firm undergoes a professional outside peer review every three years, and his own firm has a quality control system.

Mr. Pursley has represented Non-Profit entities such as Churches, State Historical Societies, Educational Societies, Fraternal Societies, Agriculture and Horticulture Societies and Humanitarian Societies such as Food Banks. Taxable Income associated with such entities is a significant portion of the representation. Such entities may offer as fund raisers, lotteries, gaming, bingo, catering, club income, cattle sales, property rentals, artistic performances, auctions, non-member sales and services and other items. These items continue to be a significant issue for non-profits and charities. Mr. Pursley generally offers his services to such public benefit groups a rate commensurate with their ability to pay. Many deserving small non-profits need such representation but do not have the ability to pay his full hourly corporate rate.

Mr. Pursley also does considerable work in the construction industry. Clients in this industry are from various areas within the state of Texas. Such entities generally require bonding and Mr. Pursley furnishes reviewed financial statements for bonding purposes to this industry. Tax work in this area is also unique and requires specialized knowledge of the tax procedures related to inventory, retainages, partial completion, and capitalization of inventory.
